CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

5.1 Conclusions

Having analyzed the data, conclusions of this study are drawn as follows:

1. There were five types of speech functions that have been found in the male and female tour guides in their touring interaction namely (1) statement, (2) question, (3) command, (4) offer and (5) minor. The most dominant speech function found was statement. It indicated the main fucntion of touring interaction is giving information.
2. The process of speech functions of male and female tour guide, there were two ways that have been found in realization of speech functions of male and female tour guides in mood, namely, (1) typical clause mood (congruent), and (2) non-typical clause mood (incongruent).
3. The reasons of the realization of speech function used by male and female tour guide in their touring interaction as (1) unequal, (2) informal, (3) positive, and (4) infrequent. This point of view see the male and female tour guide have a power to ask the tourists to do what they said, the situation or formality of the interactions is informal situation because it was in touring, means either the male or female tour guide or the tourists have no predetermined rules of interaction with always keep balancing the politeness in uttering the words, the affect lied in the touring interactions shows positive because they were freely to express their likeness by laughing or joking one each other, and the contact of the interaction was infrequent because they have not ever met before.

5.2 Suggestions

As the conclusions have taken the place, there are some suggestions presented due to this study:

1) It is suggested to those who are interested in conducting a research in the field of discourse, in particular speeech function to conduct a study in the other object, such as lawyer, stewardess, judges. Those findings will give rich contribution to other researchers and readers.
2) Since this study was only focused on congruent and incongruent realization, in which it describes how the speakers choose their role communication or their intention to the listener. It is needed for further researcher to conduct a study in terms of their congruent and incongruent to find out how the speech function realization in avoiding the misunderstanding in communication and describing the intentions of their speech.
3) It is also suggested to further researchers to explain the reason of the speech functin occurrences from its context such as power, fomality, contact and affect view in order to give specific reason of why the speech function is presented in the way they are. It will give new findings for the researcher and it will give contribution for education.
