ABSTRACT

The title of this thesis is Logical Relation in the Articles of National Geographic Magazine. This study is aimed to analyze what types of logical relation used in National Geographic Magazine, and how are logical relation used in National Geographic Magazine. The writer applies the theory of Larson adapting Barnwell Beekman and Callow, about the types of logical relation, there are (1) Reason- Result, (2) Means-Result, (3) Purpose-Means, (4) Concession-Contraexpectation, (5) Ground-Conclussion, (6) Ground-Exhortation, and (7) Condition-Consequence. Based on the result of analysis, the dominant types found in the articles of National Geographic Magazine are Propose-Means. While the percentages of the result are: 95 items of Purpose-Means (55.23%) and others are 38 items of Concession-Contraexpectation (22.1%), 14 items of Reason-Result (8.13%), 14 items of Condition-Consequence (8.13%), 8 items of Means-Result (4.66%), 3 items of Ground-Conclussion (1.75%) and 0 items of Ground-Exhortation (0%)

Keywords: syntax, logical relation, clause complex