

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In completing this thesis, the writer wishes to acknowledge her deepest gratitude for all the generous guidance and assistance that have been given to her by many people. Since it is not possible to name all of them, some deserve her very special thankfulness.

First and foremost, God the Almighty with His Guidance and Blessings, that the thesis could be completed.

Second, the writer's deepest appreciation and gratitude is especially directed to Prof. Tina Mariany Kariman, Dra., M.A., Ph.D., her first consultant, for her continuous supervision, full attention and endless encouragement given to her throughout the process of completing the thesis.

Third, her special thanks and appreciation are addressed to Amrin Saragih, M.A., Ph.D., her second consultant for his special efforts in guiding, advising, and encouraging her to finish her thesis in due course.

Fourth, the writer is very grateful to Prof. Dr. Jawasi Naibaho, Dipl. Ap. Ling., Head of the English Applied Linguistics Graduate Program for his motivation and suggestions in the completion of the thesis.

Fifth, many thanks are extended to Dra. Meisuri, M.A., Secretary of the English Applied Linguistics Graduate Program for her advice in finishing the thesis.

A special gratitude goes to Prof. Dr. Jawasi Naibaho, Dipl. Ap. Ling., Dr. Lince Sihombing, M.Pd. and Dr. Berlin Sibarani, M.Pd., her reviewers for their time spent in giving oral as well as written suggestions for the improvement of the thesis.

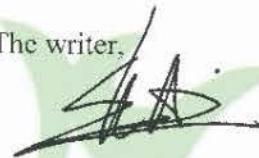

It is a great pleasure to take this opportunity to say “thank you so much” to all lecturers for their lectures and all friends for the support, friendship, and togetherness.

Last but not least, a very special gratitude is directed to her beloved family for their endless love, care, support and prayers during her time spent studying.

May God Bless Us.

Medan, January 2004

The writer,

Eka Nilam Sari