

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusions

After analyzing the data, discussing findings, conclusions are drawn as the followings.

1. Move in play of Antigone was not as theory of conversation. The dialogue was not about the asking and giving question, but debating the opinion. Thus, the response was not necessary the answer of the questions.
2. The relationship between speech function and mood was closed. Here, mood was fully as the realization of speech function.
3. Social context influences the structure of interaction in the dialogue. The kingdom social influence the language which was used in the play. Language use in this play was structured in smooth and beauty language.

B. Suggestions

Based on the conclusions above, the researcher described the suggestions in accordance with the topic.

1. It is suggested that the students of linguistics and literature should analyze other cases of language variations, especially in discourse analysis. There are many interesting subjects which are relevantly analyzed by the study of discourse analysis.

2. It is suggested that the readers should find the meaning of language application in works of literature by applying linguistics studies. Theories of linguistics are applicable to the analysis of literary work.

C. Implication

The findings of this research can be implemented to the following cases.

1. It is suggested that the students of linguistics and literature should analyze other cases of language variations, especially in discourse analysis. There are many interesting subjects which are relevantly analyzed by the study of discourse analysis.
2. It is suggested that the readers should find the meaning of language application in works of literature by applying linguistics studies. Theories of linguistics are applicable to the analysis of literary work.