

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

After analyzing the data about intertextuality in opposite editorials of presidential election 2019. The conclusion can be stated as follows:

1. There are five kinds of intertextuality were found, they are; indirect quotation, plagiarism with faulty referencing, implicit quotation, negation, and framing. The most dominant kinds of intertextuality was implicit quotation. And this kind used to make stronger connection to the readership, made them to be able to catch a reference which was served. In other words, the author allowed the readers to feel and visualized the scene rather than telling them exactly what was happening.
2. The realization of intertextuality in opposite editorial related to some elements which make it existed. There are five elements in this study found, namely; by doing paraphrasing often used in indirect quotation, Patchwriting, which was used to indicate kind of plagiarism, faulty referencing, Making implicit meaning, refer to something that is unclear, this included using idioms and proverb in text, realized in implicit quotation. Then, used contrastive conjunction, where it was indicated in negation type. And Image building. Image building related to framing.
3. The reason of intertextuality realized in opposite editorials related to presidential election were serves to deepen and broaden topics, serves to give a certain impression, serves by refining message, to turning or revive old text, to provide examples, to provide contradictory statement, to provide data, to state, to questioning.

5.2 Suggestions

After having the result of the study, suggestions are staged as following;

1. The kinds of intertextuality and the way of this study be analyzed can be provided, developed, and elaborated from another expert' intertextuality theory based on chosen data.
2. Research topics can be expanded not only limited to economic and educational issues, but also to political, social, law and human rights, energy and food, industry, tourism, environment, labor or even a happening topic like pandemic issues. So by changing the research topic, it is possible to find the whole kinds, elements of realization, and reasons for the emergence of intertextuality, or even new findings that are useful for future research references.
3. It is suggested that the findings of this study of intertextuality could be used as a kind of “strategic device” for seeing the assumed meanings and views of the text for the readers, the authors, and the context that are not usually disposed to see.
