

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusions

After analyzing the data, conclusion are drawn as the following:

1. The novel Never Let Me Go, as a conventional moral analysis, is an appropriate object. As the main figure and narrator of this novel, Kathy H's character showed the perspective of the conventional ethical stages that other cloned people could represent in the case of cloned humans who grew up in Hailsam. Character of Kathy H also shows other characters' attitude and does so in relation to her other characters. However, on the other hand, Kathy H's character is a character who has little in common, as if the author showed that the character of Kathy H was not a good memory. Feeling and Trust are the two stages in the conventional morality of Kathy H. Drawing on her solid experience of Good Interpersonal Relations in Hailsam dormitory, Kathy H has two dominant features.
2. Every form of Kathy H's character's conventional morality is in Kathy's own character and in Kathy H's dialog with others, but Kathy H's narrative as narrator is dominated. According to Tyson 2006, Psychoanalysis in literature is used to record the symptoms of events that a character experiences in the literary work being analyzed. However some opinions say it is a matter of different perspectives for the analysis of fictional characters with real characters. Real life replicas are fictitious characters in literary works.

3. All forms of conventional morals of Kathy H against the rules she as a cloned human who lives in Hailsam makes Kathy H's character an individual who obeys the rules and Trust the decisions that are set. Therefore, with the situation of Kathy H and other cloned humans in the Novel Never Let Me Go as the urgency of the need for organ donors, it shows that the general problem currently occurring is the Covid-19 pandemic, indicating that regulations that occur in one location, place, region with urgency in the form of medical devices, viruses, and the seems like will create a new moral pattern that has an impact on the personality of the affected individual.
