CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusions

Based on the data and discussion of this research, the following conclusions may be reached. Regarding the first goal of this study, which was to identify and explain the types of words that are considered taboo in the Army of The Dead movie script, the study found that there are eight types of words that are considered taboo in this movie script: cursing, profanity, obscenity, vulgarity, slang, epithets, insults and slurs, and scatology.

Obscenity is the type of taboo word with the highest frequency. In 103 data, obscenity appears 33 times. Scatology has the lowest frequency, appearing just 2 times out of 103 data. Obscenity is always used in speech because it is thought to be the best way to express one's emotions and to insult and scream about something that makes one upset about their current situation. Additionally, it can easily harm another person's self-esteem and inclination or be used in an obscene manner to demonstrate contempt for them.

The least used taboo words are Scatology. Thus they are not a strong strategy to convey opinions or to show a piece towards people as they are simply dirty words. Using Jay's theory, the second objective of this study is to find out why the Army of the Dead movie script used taboo words. Jay says that there are five motives people use words that are considered taboo: anger and frustration, descriptive evaluative, joking, surprise, and sarcastic irony or insult. Additionally, this movie's script contains every motive. In the Army of the Dead movie script, the most common motive is anger and frustration, which is used 39 times, followed by joking 19 times, surprise 17 times, descriptive evaluative 16 times, and sarcastic irony or insults 12 times.
