Based on the theory of Doche and Ross, researchers can answer research problems contained in the online novel Homicidal. And the three types of reader responses are The Self-Deprecators, The Re-Reader, and finally The Senser. They are one reader response with The Self-Deprecators, forty-three reader responses with The Re-Reader type, and eighteen reader responses with The Senser reader type.

B. SUGGESTION

Reflecting on the above conclusion, some suggestions as presented:

1. It is recommended for students to enrich their understanding of the characteristics of a person who has a habitus gay in life at least once and an understanding of the type of reader response used by someone such as in online novels used by researchers. It can also be used to see reader responses on social media such as Instagram, Twitter, Facebook, and other applications.
2. It is suggested for the researcher to add significance to evolution for the description as well as an understanding of the habitus gay and the type of everyday reader response. And for anyone interested in learning more about the habitus gay and the types of reader response that can be found on social media, it's important to understand how habitus gay lives and how others respond over time. It is also recommended that readers or other researchers use it as a source of more information when conducting future research on habitus gay and reader response types.
