

ABSTRACT

Panjaitan, Pinta Omasuli, 2014. Code-Mixing Used by The Presenters on VISI FM. A Thesis, English Department of Faculty of Language and Arts. State University of Medan.

This study deals with code-mixing used by presenters on VISI FM. The purpose of the study is to identify the forms of code mixing, which occurred in the utterances of presenters, to find out the dominantly of code mixing that used by presenters, to find out the reason of the dominantly of code mixing by the presenters, and also to find out the differences between female and male of using code mixing. The object of this study is VISI FM's presenters namely Deris and Lia. The tape recorder is used for collecting the data where the utterance of presenters were recorded while presenting that program. After collecting the data, the writer found that forms of code mixing occurred in the presenters's utterances are code mixing in forms words, phrases, and sentences. Code mixing in form of word is dominantly used by male presenters namely Deris, where the percentage of the occurrence of code mixing in his utterances are 255 code mixing, where there are 29 code mixing in form of sentences, 92 code mixing in form of phrases, and 133 code mixing in form of words and code mixing in form of sentence is dominantly used by female presenter namely Lia where the percentage of the occurrence of code mixing in her utterances are 184 code mixing occurred where there are 82 code mixing in form of sentences, 44 code mixing in form of phrases, and 58 code mixing in form of words.