ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In completing this thesis, the writer wishes to acknowledge his deepest gratitude for all the generous guidance and assistance that have been given to him by many people. Since it is not possible to name all of them, some deserve his very special thankfulness.

First and foremost, God the Almighty with His Guidance and Blessing, that the thesis could be completed.

Second, the writer's deepest appreciation and gratitude is especially directed to Amrin Saragih, M.A., Ph.D., his first supervisor, for his continuous-marvelous supervisions, full attention and endless encouragement given to him throughout the process of completing the thesis.

Third, his special thanks and appreciation are addressed to Prof. Tina Mariany Arifin, M.A., Ph.D., his second supervisor for her special efforts in guiding, advising and encouraging him to finish his thesis in due course.

Fourth, The writer is very grateful to Prof. Dr. Jawasi Naibaho, Dipl. Ap. Ling., Head of the English Applied Linguistics Graduate Program for his motivation and suggestions in the completion of the thesis.

Fifth, many thanks are extended to Dra. Meisuri, M.A. Secretary of the English Applied Linguistics Graduate Program for her advice in finishing the thesis.

A special gratitude goes to Prof. Dr. Jawasi Naibaho, Prof. D.P. Tampubolon, Ph.D., and Dr. Berlin Sibarani, M.Pd., his viewers for their time spent in giving oral as well as written suggestions for the improvement of the thesis. It is a great pleasure to take this opportunity to say “ thank you so much” to all lecturers for their lectures and all friends for the support, friendship, and togetherness.

Last but not last, a very special gratitude is directed to his beloved friend, Kristina Mutiara Silitonga whom help him conduct the research.

May God Bless Us.
