

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS, IMPLICATIONS, AND SUGGESTIONS

5.1 Conclusions

This thesis on ideational function has been analyzed, and based on the analysis, the researcher presents some valuable conclusions from Martin Luther King Jr and Winston Churchill speech analysis, and they are:

1. Material (47.57%) is the most dominant process used in motivational speech texts.
2. Location (66.97%) is the most dominant circumstance used in motivational speech texts.
3. Material process and Locution circumstance occur in motivational speech texts are influenced by context of situation and context of culture. Context of situation is comprised of three elements, namely field, mode, and tenor.
4. Parataxis (65%) is more dominantly used in motivational speech texts.
5. Parataxis extension expansion (98.70%) is more dominantly used in motivational speech texts.
6. Parataxis and Parataxis Extension Expansion used in motivational speech texts related to the cause and effects so it can emphasize the motivational speakers' message.

5.2 Implications

The implications of this study are:

1. For teachers, it would help them to increase their performance in teaching process due to their responsibility in motivating the students about the importance of the subject they teach.
2. For the university students, the availability of more sources in this thesis can be used to learn about making a motivational speech.

5.3 Suggestions

With reference to the conclusions, some following suggestions are addressed:

1. It is suggested to the next researcher to try making a research with different types of texts because there are many kinds of texts that can be further studied and observed.
2. It is suggested that the next researcher combine the approaches of language, for example Systemic Functional Linguistics (SFL) and Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA).

MILIK PERPUSTAKAAN
UNIMED