

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

After analyzing the sound devices in Minangkabau's "Pepatah-Petitih" Proverb, the conclusions were drawn as the following:

1. There were five types of sound devices that were found in Minangkabau's "Pepatah-Petitih" Proverb, namely alliteration (25,54 %), assonance (13,59 %), consonance (11,96 %), rhyme (28,80 %), and repetition (20,10 %).
2. The most dominant type of sound device that were found in Minangkabau's "Pepatah-Petitih" Proverb was rhyme, with percentage 28,80 %
3. There were several implications of using rhyme dominantly in Minangkabau's "Pepatah-Petitih" Proverb, namely:
 - a. Minangkabau's proverb consists of various style to form a proverb including aphorism, traditional poem or verse. The most commonly found in minangkabau's proverb is traditional poem which has characteristic of rhyme. Furthermore, the author used rhyme dominantly to make a good verse and create a beautiful sound.
 - b. Rhyming sounds help to mark off the end of lines, thus clarifying the metrical structure to get the readers and listeners attention.

- c. The Author used rhyme to make the proverb more interesting and memorable so this proverb could be remembered and enjoyable by people especially Minangkabau's society from generation to the generation as a local wisdom of Minangkabau.

B. Suggestion

Having seen the result of this research, it is useful to consider the following suggestions:

1. The writer suggests that the readers especially the students in English Literature Department should do a deeper study or research in sound devices in order to get a better understanding of it.
2. There are many types of sound devices, the researcher limited this study to six types of sound devices. The writer suggests to the further researchers who want to do a research with similar topic or who want to continue this research to analyze another type of sound device that are not found in this research.
3. The writer hopes the author can use sound devices in their writing so the readers can easily understand the meaning of work and enjoy it. The result shows that there are the big contribution and existences of sound devices to make a good and interesting work.