CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusions

Based on the the research findings found after analyzing the trascript of royal letter of Sumateran Malay, the conclusion drew as follow:

1. The type of interpersonal metaphor of mood is used and can be applied in written text such as the royal letter of Sumatran Malay.
2. The type of interpersonal metaphor found in the letters is only declarative type of mood metaphor. The letters are only written in statement and also as the form of letter they are typical of one sided communication. Therefore, there is only a few of speech function variety since there is no response to the writer.
3. The use of interpersonal metaphor of mood in the five letters transcript that is only one type of metaphor of mood used in the letter of Sumateran Malay had a reason to be explained. The writers use interpersonal metaphor of mood which is closely related to social context. The writers use interpersonal metaphor of mood to politely express their message and intimate the relation between the kingdoms.

B. Suggestions

After doing the library research, then obtained the data and information in accordance with the required to research purpose, the researcher would like to give suggestion and hopefully can be useful for the development of thinking for the continuity of a process of unity and the nation. The suggestions are mentioned below:

1. For the further researcher, the writer suggest the next researcher to expand the object of old manuscripts other than the royal letter of Sunateran Malay where the form of old manuscripts contain deep history and it can make the research be more challenging for the next researcher. Furthermore, the researcher suggest that the next researcher can try to use the same theory to analyze more written text and find more interpersonal grammatical metaphor that is used in it.
2. The readers and students can understand more of the theory and get more information about how people does not always express their messages straightly as the want to by using metaphor in grammatical form. Also that the readers and students especially Indonesian readers and students can understand that there are also many stories and histories they can find in a form of old manuscripts such as the royal letters of Sunateran Malay. Also from this research they can learn the golden beauty of old letter and triggered to use the interpersonal metaphor in today's letter. /
