

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

After conducting the research about speech function of Anies Baswedan's speech, there are some conclusions which are got. The conclusions are as follows.

1. There are three types of speech function in Anies Baswedan's speech. The speech functions are: statement, question, and command.
2. There are two types of speech function mood in Anies Baswedan's speech; those are: marked and unmarked mood.
3. There are four reasons of the speaker applying the speech functions. The reasons are: for informing, motivating, persuading, and getting information.

5.2 Suggestion

After analyzing the speech function of Anies Baswedan's speech, there are some suggestions which are recommended. The suggestions are as follows.

1. The speaker should consider the speech function that he utters. He must be able to decide the appropriate speech function that he will utter by considering the audience. If the audience are educated people, they will get understanding easily about the intent of the speaker.
2. A speaker should consider the mood of the speech function. If the speech function is command, but the form is in statement, sometimes it makes a sense that there is no stress there, so people think that it is not crucial. They just listened as though as listened an information.

3. A speaker should consider the reasons and the goal in uttering the speech function so that the listeners can give the response that the speaker expects. For example, when the speaker is going to persuade people, just do it by uttering the speech function of command to make a sense that it is a stress or strong point that the listeners get and do as well as requested by the speaker.