Dear Author,
Your paper is online:

<https://www.gssrr.org/index.php?journal=JournalOfBasicAndApplied&page=article&op=view&path%5B%5D=10155&path%5B%5D=4405>

Important note:

Publishing in an international journal means that the author is seeking that his paper is visible to the other researchers around the globe to cite it (kindly read the following topic "Three Reasons Why Citation is Important" at the end of this email).

To facilitate your paper citation and visibility; we recommend that you add your paper title, abstract, journal name, upload its PDF file (note: this is a very important factor), and add your paper hyper link (this link is given to you at the beginning of this email) (note: this is extremely important factor) to the following:

- 1- Personal page within your university site; especially within "your publications page" or "university publications repository". (more details can be found at the end of this email.)
- 2- Your personal website.
- 3- Your Research Gate account (you can easily create an account using <https://www.researchgate.net> ). Within your research gate account search for the blue button "add new", then choose: "publication", then choose: "article" then choose: "Add manually", then add the PDF and the details for your article.
- 4- Your social media accounts (Face Book account, tweeter, google plus, etc).

How to add your paper details within your Personal page or within your university site:

If you're an individual author, it works best to simply upload your paper to your website, e.g., www.example.edu/~professor/jpdr2009.pdf; and add a link to it on your "publications page", such as www.example.edu/~professor/publications.html. Make sure that:

- a. the full text of your paper is in a PDF file that ends with ".pdf",
- b. the title of the paper appears in a large font on top of the first page,
- c. the authors of the paper are listed right below the title on a separate line, and
- d. there's a bibliography section titled, e.g., "References" or "Bibliography" at the end.

Three Reasons Why Citation is Important:

Citation is important because it is the basis of academics, that is, the pursuit of knowledge. In the academic endeavor, individuals look at evidence and reason about that evidence in their own individual ways. That is, taking what is already known, established, or thought, they use their reasoning power to create new knowledge. In creating this knowledge, they must cite their sources accurately for three main reasons:

Reason One: Because ideas are the currency of academia First, citing sources is important because the currency of academia is ideas. As a result, academics want to accumulate that currency; they want to get credit for their contributions. When a writer cites ideas, that writer honors those who initiated the ideas.

Reason Two:

Because failing to cite violates the rights of the person who originated the idea Second, keeping track of sources is important because, if you use someone else's idea without giving credit, you violate that person's ownership of the idea. To understand this violation, envision the following scenario: You and your friend are discussing some ideas from class during lunch one day, and you make what you consider to be a particularly insightful observation. During class discussion that afternoon, your friend brings up your observation but neglects to point out that it is yours, not his. The professor beams and compliments your friend on his clear and insightful thinking. In this scenario, you likely feel that there's something unfair about your friend's implicit claim that your idea was his or her own. After all, you had been thinking about the idea, perhaps had devoted time to developing it, and you are not getting credit for it. Worse, someone else is. That sense of violation you feel, the sense that something valuable has been stolen from you, suggests why failure to cite sources hurts another person. The Importance of Citation - 2 –

Reason Three:

Because academics need to be able to trace the genealogy of ideas Third, keeping track of sources is important because academics value being able to trace the way ideas develop. Consider the scientist who looks at an experiment described in a new publication, and then decides to perform an experiment to extend the results. At the same time, other scientists are planning experiments to test the findings, to contest the findings, to relate the findings to their own research: all of these "second generation" experiments owe their inspiration to the original idea. If another person reads one of the "second generation" ideas, proper citation will allow that person to explore the original publication to trace the way the idea has developed. In general, scholars must be able to trace how ideas develop in order to consider, think about, and test them accurately. So giving credit to the original source of ideas is the right thing to do, as well as the basis on which academia is built. For more discussion on the ethical responsibilities of scientists in citing sources, sharing credit, and other matters, please see On Being a Scientist: Responsible Conduct in Research, Second Edition (National Academy of Sciences, National Academy of Engineering, Institute of Medicine 1995). These three reasons suggest why it is important both to cite sources and to use them well. And neither is easy. You will learn about how to cite, when to cite, and why to cite throughout your college career. Your work in the tutorial is intended only to help you begin to consider these complicated questions.
