INTRODUCTION

A. The Background of the Study

In Indonesia, English becomes a foreign language for students. There are 4 skills in learning English, they are; reading, writing, speaking, and listening. Reading is an important skill for students in learning English as a foreign language. Reading skill will be helped the students to get the information in the textbook. According to Kim & Hall in Vellenga (2004), learning material like textbook plays the important role in English Language Teaching (ELT), particularly in English as a Foreign Language (EFL) classroom.

Most schools are not using a proper textbook as their main sources for teaching their students. It makes the students get difficult to understand their textbook. It makes the students are not interest with the existing textbook. According to Paulston & Brader in Nanda (2016), reading materials which are appropriate to the needs of learners would be easier for them to achieve the learning purposes. It is also supported by Hutchinson and Waters (2010), “ESP is an approach to language teaching in which all decisions as to content and method are based on the learner’s reason for learning.” The reading materials should proper with the needs of student to make them more interest and understand with the material.

The teachers need to find the proper textbook with students’ need, especially for vocational students. The teachers will be easier to explain the material with an addition of learning purposes explanation. The students will be easier to achieve the learning process. According to Herlina (2012) teachers need to find materials which are suit with the curriculum, which is based on the standard competence and the basic competence. The reading material was not suitable with the needs of vocational students. It was made the students have a low ability to understand it.

The English book designed by Kemendikbud is not appropriate for vocational school, especially for the Accounting student at SMK Negeri 1 Medan. It is proved by interviewing the teacher and students in previous research. They says that the descriptive material in the textbook have an inversely proportion' topics with their study program, such as; Tanjung Puting National Park, Taj mahal and Orang Utan. The example of inappropriate topic is Tanjung Puting National Park. The text describe about the famous ecotourism destination where is located in the southwest of central Kalimantan peninsula which is home of the scarce animal in the world: orang utans. The data shows that descriptive text is more appropriate with the Tourism department than Accounting study program. The explanation above shows the inappropriate reading materials are causing many problems, such as; the students are not interesting and make them have low motivation to learn it. The textbook is based on 2013 Curriculum (Kurikulum 2013).

The reading competences of descriptive text for vocational students based on 2013 Curriculum are (3.7) and (4.9). These competences are to analyze the social function, structure of text and language features and to respond the meaning of descriptive text using oral and written text of descriptive text about people, public place and historic building.

The explanation above indicates the necessity to develop appropriate reading materials for vocational school especially accounting study program. The proper topics, such as the balance sheet and the finance minister of Indonesia. In order to make the students interested to read their new materials which are appropriate with their needs.
