

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusions

After analyzing the data, conclusions were drawn as the following.

- (1). The researcher found three kinds of language variations from four language variation based on the theory. The three variations used in Riau Malay language in Rokan Hilir Regency namely regional dialect, language variation by sex and social dialect. The most dominant kind was regional dialect.
- (2). The realizations of language variations found in Riau Malay language in Rokan Hilir Regency namely lexical, phonology and grammar, the most dominant kind was phonological variation.
- (3). The reasons for the variation of Riau Malay language in Rokan Hilir Regency were geographical and chronological. Other than two reasons, there are two additional reasons that cause variation of Riau Malay Language in Rokan Hilir Regency they were mixed marriage and technological development. Geographical was the most reason found as the cause variation of Riau Malay language in Rokan Hilir Regency.

5.2 Suggestions

In relation to the conclusions, suggestions were staged as the following.

- (1) It is suggested for further studies should be conducted to find out more kinds of language variation in other context, because this study has limited data sources because it is currently in the covid-19 pandemic.

- (2). It is a suggestion that further studies should be conducted to find out more realization of language variation in the same or other context to enrich the analysis realization of language variation.
- (3). It is advisable for the readers especially other researcher to conduct the research about language variation and understand for all language variation in Indonesiaas one of the effort to maintain the language and enrich the research of language variation.

