

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. CONCLUSIONS

After the data of “Life Of Pi” had been analyzed, conclusion were drawn as follow.

1. The types of psycho-social development that was found by the writer in this movie were Initiative vs Guilt (passed) , Industry vs Inferiority (passed), Identity vs Role confusion (passed), Intimacy vs Isoaliton (passed), and Generativity vs stagnation (failed).
2. The writer found that each stages in this theory successfully affect the characterization of the main character in the movie. Each crisis give some changes on the behaviour wether it is from biological development or social development.
3. The writer found that there are some dominants crisis happened to the character, and it is obviously change or affects the character and create some positive change in the characterization while the main character facing some conditions.
4. Meanwhile , the writer also found some crisis on certain stages occure when it is not in the range of age itself, so the writer claimed that it is a part of failure crisis.

B. SUGGESTIONS

There are several suggestions that writer could offer to readers towards psycho-social development analysis, they are.

1. It is suggested to the further reasearchers who want to make wider exploration on psycho-social development analysis that it is important to explore more about the nature of characterization in literary works. Character and characterization of a person, wether it is from a movie or novel or other kind of literary genre.
2. For everyone who reads this study, especially teenager. it is suggested to increase and develop the study to enrich the understanding of character and characterization learning.
3. For the future student of English and Literature Department who wants to conduct the similar researchs, it is suggested to add more complete materials, studies, and analysis, yet the writer feels this thesis is way from perfect.