Dear Editor,

We would like to submit article entitled, "Dominant Socio-Economic Indicators on the Growth of Small-Scale Industrial Sector: Empirical Evidence with Principal component analysis," authored by Eko Wahyu NUGRAHADI, Indra MAIPITA, Chandra SITUMEANG for consideration for publication in Revista Espacios. This study aims to analyze the dominant factors that affect the optimal performance of the economic policy of the small business sector with case study in food, beverage and tobacco sector development in North Sumatra, Indonesia. Using Principal component analysis [PCA], the components examined are investment, wage, inflation, exchange rate, population, total workers, GDRP, industrial GDRP, interest rate and total credit. The results of the analysis show that the variables which are the two dominant factors are population and credit.

We hope you will respond this submission match with your journal scope. The discussion is interesting and involving general aspects of economics, and the methodology is valid, and the results as well analysis was conducted and presented in detail.

We hope this submission will be accepted.

Best regards,

Eko Wahyu

Dear professor WahyuÑ

The reviewer of Dominant Socio-Economic Indicators on the Growth of Small-Scale Industrial Sector: Empirical Evidence with Principal Component Analysis believes that the article can be approved with minor corrections. The reviewer considers that "The article presents an interesting analysis of the socio-economic indicators in the small business sector (tobacco, food and beverages) in North Sumatra based on empirical evidence and PCA. The work is interesting and its conclusions are right. I recommend the review of the attached file which contains some mostly writing observations. Paragraph 5 on page 4 must be reviewed and rewritten. It is confusing."

The comments are found throughout the annexed article.

We remind you to keep the same file name (190829 Wahyu) when you submit the corrected article.

Saludos cordiales / Regards / Atenciosamente,
Revista Espacios
