

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

1. Ming Lee character as mother is show as a good mother, according to Johnston and Swanson theory are as selfless, interdependence, success, and natural mother.
2. "Turning Red" portrays motherhood as shaped by Ming Lee's experience as a daughter and the influence of her family's ancestral beliefs.

B. Suggestion

1. It is suggested the students learn more of the representation of every participant's character in films, novels, advertisements, videos, and posters.
2. The reader can learn about motherhood. It is because motherhood is not about pregnancy and taking care of the children. It is about women's experience as mothers and the challenge become mothers.
3. Based on the thesis, the reader who is interested in learning to become a mother or father can learn how to be a good mother or father and use this thesis as the first guide.
4. It can be suggested that the next researchers explore more motherhood and representation theory for analyzing more varied analysis with concern to reach an accurate result of the study.